

How to Get Real Value from Your Cashback Card

8 tips to maximize your daily value

YOUR CHOICE & RESPONSIBILITY

- Using many cards to maximize cashback may be a good idea
- Interest and balance fees beat cashback
- Cash & transfers from credit card cost you more

CASHBACK RADAR EVALUATES THESE FACTORS AND CALCULATES PROJECTED NET VALUE ACROSS CASHBACK PRODUCTS

- Credit cards usually offer higher cashback than debit.
- Seasonal spending dips can cause threshold misses
- High cashback rates often hide strict limits
- Cross-Border purchases often cost more than you expect
- Annual Fees: a key part of your net value

You've mastered responsible card use.
Now find the card that pays you the most!

› Find My Card

cashbackradar.io

Disclaimer: The information on this page is for general educational purposes only. It explains common cashback card concepts but does not include card-specific fees, rates, limits, exclusions, or benefit calculations. Cashback amounts, eligibility, caps, category definitions, FX charges, and annual fees vary by bank and by product, and may change at any time. The tips provided here are not financial advice, do not recommend any specific card, and should not be relied upon to choose a product. Before applying for any card or making financial decisions, always review the official terms, fee schedule, and rewards rules published by the issuing bank.